Discovered in 1930's, some 11,000 stones have been found with accurate pictures of dinosaurs. They were used by the Inca Indians as burial stones (approx. 500-1500 AD). Historical records also show that in 1570 the Spanish Conquistadors had taken some stones back to Spain.

Too good to be true?

This artefact (both sides shown here) was given to the author by an academic at a secular Peruvian university as an authentic Inca or pre-Inca engraving. At first glance it appears to be the common modern combination of Triceratops and T. rex, but in fact several features make it unlikely that a T. rex depiction was in view. Some indicators of age also suggest that a modern forgery is unlikely (see text).

• Soft Tissue Found In Dinosaur Bone

“A Tyrannosaurus rex fossil has yielded what appears to be the only preserved soft tissues ever recovered from a dinosaur. ...

Most fossils preserve an organism's hard tissues, such as shell or bone. Finding preserved soft tissue is unheard of in a dinosaur-age specimen....

’Finding these tissues in dinosaurs changes the way we think about fossilization, because our theories of how fossils are preserved don't allow for this [soft-tissue preservation],’ said Mary H. Schweitzer, a paleontologist at North Carolina State University in Raleigh.”
